

Keynote speakers

Keynote 1:

Mike Molesworth

Senior Lecturer in the Media School at Bournemouth University

Mike is a former Learning and Teaching fellow for the Centre of Excellence in Media Practice. He has a PhD in consumer culture and is a member of the Emerging Consumer Cultures research group at Bournemouth University. He is Co-editor of 'The Marketisation of Higher Education and the Student as Consumer' (Routledge, 2011).

Keynote 2:

Caitlin Bloom

Deputy President, Education, De Montfort Student Union

Caitlin studied Business and Management and graduated in 2011. She works to the best possible academic experience for students whilst at DMU. This involves her representing students at university committees such as Academic Board and Learning and Teaching meetings. This ensures students' views are the driver for every decision made at every level within the university. She does this by talking to course and faculty representatives to find out what is going on in the lecture theatre, tutorials and labs to help share best practise and resolve issues. Elections for these positions occur in the first 3 weeks of term. An enthusiastic rower and has previously been a dancer.

Keynote 3:

Sarah Oldfield

Vice Principal (Curriculum), Regent College, Leicester

Sarah has been teaching in Secondary and Sixth Form since 1996. She studied at De Montfort University for her degree then completed a PGCE at Leicester University. During her career she has continued to study and is about to commence her NPQH this October. Her current role at Regent College is Director of Curriculum and Learning. She has always enjoyed teaching as well as working with staff to improve their practice. At Riverside Business and Enterprise College she was responsible for the ITT and worked with the PGCE students, the NQTs and the GTP staff.
